

Recommendation Letter for Lola Gabellini-Fava

To whom it may concern,

There is one person whose character and persona had so profoundly struck me with awe I cannot quite fathom the thought of what to call them. That person is called Lola. She has one of these rare capabilities in people in being able to somehow so smoothly apply such a balanced, efficient and committed work ethic whilst working with a grace and ease that makes any situation however difficult appear enjoyable and never overly formal to the point of awkwardness.

We undertook together an extensive immersion lasting a month into a highly intensive editing process of my recent literary work that encompassed the scope of a diary revised, rewritten, retouched and repolished to shine with excellence. She has managed to extract my Gallicism and all the grammatical errors, irregularities and rants that had been distorted due to my French upbringing. Lola remains an inspiring person I look up to as a fourteen years old as a shining light in the darkness in troubled times of grammatical needs.

Being raised in England with French links, Lola is not only fluent in both languages but has managed to adapt to each of their mentalities and apply the best of the both together. What results is a wonderful mix of the English calmness, politeness, reserve and dedication to getting things done without distraction whilst assuming an unabashed Frenchness that embodies an open attitude to life, communicative character, livelihood, continental verve and suave sagacity.

I remain profoundly impressed by her persona and think that in any field she will be able to apply her quick wit, moderation, prudence, soundness of mind and remarkable calmness in the face of stressful situations. She has a character that is able to adapt to any circumstances at hand and I have no doubt that she will continue to shine anywhere she goes in this world, treading a distinct path carrying the flaming torch of knowledge. Lola Gabellini-Fava remains a connoisseur in the art of bullshitting.

Yours Sincerely
